

No signs of obsolescence: Force Technologies marks 40 years at the next IOM Member Meeting

At the next IOM Member Meeting on 16 June in Swindon, Force Technologies, event sponsor, will mark its 40th anniversary. The meeting brings together industry experts and others shaping the future of obsolescence management.

For 40 years, Force Technologies has helped customers navigate long-term continuity challenges, building its reputation of specialist knowledge, practical support and a lasting commitment to solving obsolescence challenges.

That reputation has been earned by the team at Force Technologies, including Karen Salmon, CEO and Fellow of IOM, Ben Savage, Applications Manager and Associate of IOM, and Charlotte Hughes, Commercial Manager and Member of IOM, underlining the business's strong ties with the obsolescence community.

In 2026, the business continues to expand the ways it supports customers, developing new capabilities in response to changing continuity pressures.

The meeting will mark both a significant company milestone, and provide the setting for the launch of a major new sovereign capability. IOM members attending the meeting will be among the first to hear more.
